Reclaiming The Powder Puff.

Powder puffs quickly lose their first fluffy freshness, and as many people think that they will not wash successfully they are thrown away when soiled. Fluffy powder puffs will wash as well as any other kind if a little care is taken.

First remove all the surplus powder by shaking the puff well. Then immerse it in soapy water. Do not attempt to squeeze or rub, but just lift the puff up and down in the water. Finally rinse several times in lukewarm water. Shake well and dry in front of the fire. Shake the puff several times during the drying process.

CANE CHAIRS THAT SAG

To tighten cane-seated chairs that are inclined to sag, wash them in a strong solution of soda and water. As it dries, the cane will shrink and become taut.

The Woman's Page

Many Types Seen
Among Red Heads
Auburn Hair Should be Played
Up To Advantage
Striking Effects In Clothes

One of the greatest charms of auburn-haired people is their lovely skin. It is usually that exquisite, fragile white. Even the freckles on it add to its whiteness by contrast. When one can find the real auburn hair with brown or deep blue eyes and that lovely creamy skin—it is a combination for anyone to admire.

Some "red heads" are sandy—which often means a skin inclined to be florid, eyebrows and hair of a faded sandy colour, and usually pale eyes. If you are of this type you must be careful or you will look all of one colour. Then also there is the flaming "carrot" type. This type can be a real flame, if dressed correctly, and has a personality to match; or can be a caricature, if allowed to be flamboyant in dress.

Colours Effect

Auburn-haired people are in the class called people of warm colouring. There is no other type that can so completely change the appearance by the use of colours. Especially is this true if the hair is really auburn. Match it in colours and you become a brown wren type of person, in appearance. Stimulate it with cool, complementary colours such as blue, blue-green, and green, and the red tones in the hair are emphasized making it seem much brighter. Thus, if you have very vivid hair, which you wish to subdue, you must be careful of these colours and wear them only in softened, grayed shades.

For the sandy-haired woman they are excellent. They brighten up the hair, by contrast, and also subdue outfit.

stimulate the eyes, by reflection, which are often inclined to be pale. If your eyes have more of a greenish hue, you may find a greenish blue, the most flattering. If they are blue or gray-blue, the soft or dark blues and blue-greens will be best. Be careful not to use too strong a blue or it will defeat your purpose, by making the hair look brassy and making your eyes appear faded, because of lesser value.

The strong colour will also bring out the yellow—in the skin, of which this type often has considerable. If you have a florid skin, however, it will be stimulated by these colours. In this case add a subduing note in the dark, warm tones near the face, or pale tones matching the hair.

Striking Effect.

Black and white also stimulate the hair by definite contrast. Blacks are usually lovely on the auburn-haired woman. This is not only because of the contrast with the hair, but if she is fortunate enough to have the white skin, its whiteness and beauty are emphasized by contrast.

You may look especially lovely in the contrasting combination of black and white, though be very sure the white is not whiter than your skin. There is no smarter combination, if it is in the right proportion and adapted to the individual. We might note here that any striking combination must be unusually smart and be exactly right for the individual, because it is more conspicuous than a more subdued outfit.

LATEST VELVET
IS WASHABLE
Light Airy Material In Summer Colours.

It may surprise you to know that the latest member of the velvet family is washable. This material is not to be confused with the winter waterproof velvets. Rather it is a light airy material that is obtainable in delectable summer colours, and is sold under the heading of "washable goods."

Velvet requires a little more care in washing, however, than is needed for cottons and silks. The soap and water bath is the same, but while it would be disastrous to tie silks or rayons into knots that is just what should be done to velvet. This treatment eliminates ironing, which would destroy the crinkly pattern that is characteristic of this new material.

First the velvet frock is squeezed until all the water is out. Then it is folded into a long, narrow roll. The roll is tightened and the ends of it tied together. After remaining in that position for a night it should be shaken out and hung up to dry next morning.

A WELL-PLANNED
TROUSSEAU.

Delicate step-in and brassiere sets, form-fitting slips with hand-made lace, and lovely nightgowns and negligees are "musts" in a well-planned trousseau.

Chinese red chiffon is worn over a slip of yellow novelty crepe. The voluminous sleeves, tied at the elbow, show through the fabric, and the cluster of panels on the square neckline are fascinating features which make the negligee an outstanding trousseau fashion.

THE "BLOUSETTE"
Very Successful For Afternoon Wear.

London. A few weeks ago the "blousette" had not been heard of. Those of us who have tried it are now wondering how we ever managed without it.

It is so smart and easily packed that it is a special boon at holiday time. It can be so quickly made—and laundered—that it is sure of a permanent place in the mode.

Its smartest guise is in navy and white spotted foulard with a pale grey costume.

It is very successful in white for pique for dark suits, and looks marvellous in gold or silver lame with smart black afternoon costumes.

TRIMMING WITH SEQUINS.

Sequins can be stitched on the dress in a double line to suggest a yoke, or you can cover little epaulettes with them, while lines of sequins look most effective from the wrist to the elbow of a tight sleeve. Do not overdo this trimming, for, while a few sequins are smart, too many would make a dress look "cheap."

RESTORING LAST YEAR'S
WHITE STRAW HATS

Last year's white straw hat often shows a faint brown tinge in comparison with the new season's models. This is due to frequent exposure to sunshine. The original whiteness can be restored by scrubbing the straw with a nailbrush dipped in half a pint of tepid water to which a teaspoonful of oxalic acid has been added. If a shiny appearance is desired, brush the hat evenly with the white of an egg.

SOME HINTS FOR SKIN HEALTHInternal Treatments By London Specialists

SKIN MUST BE HEALTHY

The smart woman realizes nowadays that a satin-smooth skin with a matt texture cannot be attained by cosmetics alone; the foundation tissues must be healthy, the skin must be young, elastic, without lines and without any trace of acidity or sallowness which comes from internal ill-health.

That is why two of the leading specialists in London begin their beauty treatments, the one with a saline and complexion cachets based on the sulphur and golden syrup principle of the Victorian Nannette, and herb juices, put up in bottles of a month's supply.

Spinach Juice

Women who need a tonic are given spinach juice, and for those with rheumatic tendencies—so often turning a fine skin sallow—there is fresh celery juice. Blemishes and spots that appear in the spring and must be got rid of before the season starts can be banished with watercress juice, and any tendency to liverishness by the juice of fresh dandelions.

When the internal beauty treatments are completed, specialists have to combat the effects of cold spring winds, cruise tan and winter sport. The same specialist who completes a skin-renewing and clearing outfit for his country clients who cannot attend for personal treatment, has for several years prescribed a special course of home treatment for broken veins in the face.

Patched Skin

No application of rouge will disguise the patchy effect upon an otherwise smooth skin, but a nour-

Grease Spots On Evening
Frocks.

Delicate evening frocks which are made of chiffon and georgette sometimes become spotted with grease, and it is a problem to know how to treat them without damaging the fragile material.

The usual methods for removing grease spots must not be employed, and it will be found that ordinary talcum powder will repair the damage successfully. Sprinkle the grease spots liberally with the talcum powder, rubbing it in gently. Leave it on for twenty-four hours and then brush it off gently with a soft brush. After this treatment the grease spots will not be noticeable.

Washing and astringent skin food applied at night, with an astringent tonic used three times a day, will remove them in time.

Once the broken veins have disappeared this specialist has another astringent lotion to be patted into the face and allowed to dry, which will prevent their reappearance. The cleansing consists of a greaseless massage cream for night use, a nongreasy day cream, to be followed by a matt-surfacing lotion and a mildly astringent face power.

Matt-Surface Skin

A woman who believes that all cosmetics should be in lotion form and that creams should be banished from the beauty outfit during the season, has a treatment for producing the indispensable matt-surface skin that is increasingly fashionable. It consists of four lotions: one a purifying, one a cleansing and tightening, one a nourishing liquid skin food, and a herbal foundation lotion for powder. While the skin is damp from the herbal lotion this specialist shows her clients how to powder their faces to get the "de-lustrated" look.

BRIDGE NOTES

DUPLICATE BIDDING

by Ely Culbertson.

Duplicate Contract Bridge, as those who play it have learned, is in some respects an artificial game differing from Rubber and Progressive Contract.

One of the chief differences in Duplicate occurs in the bidding. Good players have found that in Duplicate it is necessary to open hands which do not measure up to the requisite number of honour-tricks, particularly in cases where the hand also contains a count for honours. Honours in Duplicate loom very large indeed, and the Duplicate player who passes when holding a five-card or longer suit containing 100 honours is apt to find he has made a serious mistake, which will result in low score on the board. This is particularly true in all Duplicate games scored on a match-point basis. Take, for instance, the hand below:

North, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

North:—

S—A Q J 10 6 4
H—7 5
D—K 6 8
C—8 4

West:—

S—5 2
H—K 8 3 2
D—A 10
C—Q 10 7 6 3

South:—

S—9 7 3
H—A 9 6
D—Q 9 7 4
C—A 9 2

East:—

S—K 8
H—Q J 10 4
D—J 8 5 2
C—K J 5

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1S	Pass	1NT
Pass	2S	Pass	2NT
Pass	3S	Pass	Pass

North as Dealer in a Rubber game would not consider opening his six-card spade suit with a hand containing only two honour-tricks. He would expect, if the opponents made any bids, to enter the bidding later, and possibly, if his partner had a smattering of strength, even bid and make game with his hand. In Rubber play it would be unwise to open the hand because of the misconception as to defensive strength which would be given, and the danger that a penalty would be the result because his partner might double an adverse contract, counting upon him for ability to take two or three tricks, regardless of what the final declaration might be.

The bidding as shown above is an example of the Opening bidder's "Sign-off." Such "Sign-off" bids are usually reserved for the partner of the Opening bidder, but North's message when he has twice rebid spades must be crystal-clear to his partner. When North opens the bidding with one spade, South has a right to look forward to a future on the hand. However, his distribution does not make it advisable to crowd the bidding with two notrump; so, confident in view of the intervening pass that North will bid again, South's correct response is one notrump. North, of course, in view of his honour holding and the general weakness of his hand, must respond with two spades. At this point South has not shown the full strength of his hand, and the two-notrump response comes as a matter of course. Now when North bids three spades, the situation, particularly in Duplicate, must be clear to his partner in the South. North is unwilling to contract for game even with his partner's responses. He does not wish to play the hand in notrump, as otherwise he would have raised two notrump to three South, with his balanced hand, should readily decide the message that North is interested only in a part-score and not in a game declaration in either spades or notrump.

GERMAN GRAIN BARQUE'S RUN IN RECORD TIME

WEARY DAYS IN DOLDRUMS

PADUA'S RACE VICTORY

The German barque Padua, will probably be claimed to have won this season's "grain race" from Australia. Leaving Australia at mid-night on February 17-18, she reached sight of England 107 days later—the best time recorded so far.

Both the Padua and the Priwall, another big German barque, made a record duel run of sixty-six days on the outward voyage from Hamburg last autumn. The Priwall returned in almost the same time, reaching Queens-town on Sunday June 3. The time taken on the homeward voyage must be considered extremely creditable when the strong contrary and slight following winds of the present voyage are taken into consideration. The Finnish four-masted barque Passat also arrived off the Lizard on Sunday night June 3, after accomplishing the voyage from Australia in just over 107 days. The same time was made by the Swedish vessel Abraham Rydberg, which berthed at Falmouth on April 27.

It was a close contest, typical of the gallant spirit of the crews of these fine ships. Sailing homeward, both Padua and Priwall took 85 days to the Falkland Islands via Cape Horn, and were subsequently reported together on the Equator, 77 days out. Seventeen days later they were still level, although 600 miles apart.

On Sunday, June 3, Priwall reached Queenstown, where she received her orders to proceed to Birkenhead for discharge. Capt. Claus, the master, stated that light winds and calms throughout the voyage had spoilt any possibility of a record or even good passage.

It is evident that the dreaded Doldrums have again taken their weary toll. Also, when at last within reach of England, any remaining chances of good passages have been spoilt by the recent long spells of calm weather in the North Atlantic.

It must not be forgotten that, except in isolated cases of personal rivalry, these ships do not "race," firstly because they are not in racing trim, and secondly because there is no necessity. Four months' free warehousing is better than three, from the point of view of the consignee, and the extra few weeks this year, coincident with rising grain prices, has enabled shrewd speculators to turn delayed arrivals into a further profit by resale on a rising market.

It is quite possible that, contrary to usual experience, this year's best passages will be made by the later sailings from Australia.

TSINGTAO FACTORY CUTTED

The Heng Shing flour factory in Tsingtao was gutted by fire according to a Chinese message. All the machines in the factory were damaged. The loss was estimated at $400,000.

This is the charming, if modest, colonial residence at Delham, Mass., which Miss Ellen Tuck French exchanged for the palatial Astor mansion, "Chetwode," at Newport, R.I., when she became of her engagement.

"THE LOST PATROL"—ORIENTAL THEATRE

An excellent cast of notable actors, including Victor McLaglen, Boris Karloff, Wallace Ford and Reginald Denny are featured in the R.K.O. Radio picture, "The Lost Patrol."

The film is based on the novel, "Patrol," by Philip MacDonald, and its action takes place in the desert, where a British regiment of troops are cut off from their comrades. The stand against the Arabs is both thrilling and highly entertaining.

"GOING HOLLYWOOD"—STAR THEATRE

"Going Hollywood," featuring Marion Davies, Bing Crosby, the radio star, Stuart Erwin and a host of Hollywood's prettiest chorus girls is one of the finest musical-comedies yet seen in the Colony.

It is the story of a little French teacher who falls in love with a radio singer. Miss Davies sings, dances and does some very clever acting, including a blackface song-number.

Ed D'Orey, Patsey Kelly, and the "Three Radio Rogues," are also included in the supporting cast.

"HEROES ALL"—CENTRAL THEATRE

William M. Prior, the well-known producer, presents his war epic, "Heroes All," now showing at the Central Theatre.

The picture, which shows the story and horror of war on land, on sea, and in the air, is superbly cast to give an authentic film of the Great War.

Cinema Notes

"MURDER IN TRINIDAD"—KING'S THEATRE

Intense mystery adventure takes you through a strange maze of romantic drama in Fox's current release, "Murder in Trinidad," featuring Heather Angel and Nigel Bruce, now showing at the King's Theatre.

Suspense and thrills hold the audience throughout the entire length of the film. A tuft of hair and a spot of blood form the only clues to the mystery that baffles the police of Trinidad. It was stated that when John Vandercook submitted his novel to a committee of criminologists, they were at a loss to find a solution to the mystery.

Supporting Bruce and Miss Angel in the cast are Victor Jory, J. Carrol Nash, John Davidson, Murray Kinell, Francis Ford and Claude King.

"LADY KILLER"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

"Lady Killer," a melodrama featuring James Cagney and Mae Clarke, is Warner Brothers' current release now showing at the Queen's Theatre.

The picture, based on a story written by Rosalind Keating Shaffer, is a satire on America's film colony, relating to the astounding rise to screen fame of an ex-crook by a unique publicity stunt.

Miss Clarke and Cagney, who give superb characterizations, are supported by Margaret Lindsay.

"MASSACRE"—ALHAMBRA THEATRE

"Massacre," a gripping drama of America's Indian life, is presented at the Alhambra Theatre, with an all-star cast, including Richard Barthelmess, Ann Dvorak, Dudley Digges, Claire Dodd, Robert Barrat and Sidney Taylor.

The picture, produced by First National, shows a Red Indians life in an American reservation at Iowa, how he is cheated, tortured and nearly starved to death by the white agents of the reservation.

Richard Barthelmess, who finally brings justice to his own people, gives a splendid portrayal of the educated son who returns to his tribe. He is ably supported by Miss Dvorak.

"THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY VIII"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

Notable for its excellence of setting, acting and production, "The Private Life of Henry VIII," is a clever satire on the Tudor Court of the 16th century which should be seen by every lover of good entertainment.

Produced by London Films, it has become a real epic of the screen, under the artistic directorship of Alexander Korda.

Charles Laughton gives an amazing performance as "Bluff King Hal."

"I COVER THE WATERFRONT"—LEE THEATRE

"I Cover the Waterfront," the United Artists' attraction at the Lee Theatre, is adapted from one of the outstanding novels of last season, and directed by James Cruze.

The story tells of the inside of the waterfront dramas, its loves, its hates and its hideous struggles, its beautiful calmness—all shattered by the conflict of human contraband.

The leading roles are portrayed by Claudette Colbert, Ben Lyon and the late Ernest Torrence, with a powerful cast in support. Miss Colbert takes the part of the smuggler's daughter.

DAZED AND BEWILDERED PRIMO CARNERA TRIES TO HOLD OFF DYNAMIC MAX BAER IN HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE BOUT BEFORE 52,000

Film shows of the epic Baer-Carnera fight in which the New York night-club idol won the world heavyweight title on a technical knock-out in the eleventh round from the giant Italian man-mountain. An idea of the terrible punishment sustained by the Italian ex-champion can be gathered from the beating he is receiving from Baer in the above pictures. Carnera, towering over his opponent appears dazed and beaten as blow after blow smashes against his defenceless body. Suffering from a fractured ankle, sustained in the first round, Carnera, however, fought like a Spartan against the man who was thought to be so far out of condition that there was talk of postponing the bout.

With 13 wickets for 187 runs, Freeman materially assisted Kent to record victory by an innings and 62 runs over Northants.

Frank Woolley again demonstrated that he is no back number by scoring another three-figure innings, 176.

Sussex, who are leading in the championship, held the first innings advantage over Notts. John Langridge was again to the fore, scoring 143.

BOWLERS' DAY AT LEEDS

ENGLAND'S TAIL INEFFECTIVE.

Oldfield And Woodfull Out For "Ducks."

With seven wickets in hand, Australia requires 161 runs to equal England's first innings score of 200.

It was a bowler's day at Leeds yesterday, Grimmett and O'Reilly being the heroes of the Australian attack, while Bowes fully justified his inclusion in the English side by dismissing Brown, Oldfield and Woodfull for 18 runs.

R. E. S. Wyatt was again favoured with the luck of the toss, and opened with C. F. Walters and Keeton, who replaced Sutcliffe, who is resting with a strained leg muscle.

The Australians are holding the same team as at Manchester a fortnight ago, namely: W. M. Woodfull (Capt.), D. G. Bradman, S. J. McCabe, C. V. Grimmett, W. J. O'Reilly, W. Oldfield, W. A. Brown, L. Darling, A. G. Chipperfield, W. H. Ponsford and T. Wall.

Its Extinction Menaced By Baseball

AMERICAN'S QUEER VIEWS

National ideas of humour vary so greatly that it is always difficult for people of any one nationality to be certain of understanding the jests of writers and artists of another.

Thus it cannot be stated positively whether Dr. Logan Clendenning was serious or in a humorous mood when he wrote the following for a recent issue of the San Francisco "Call-Bulletin."

"Because it is the best game in the world, baseball is the healthiest. I want to see a cricket game a year or two ago in London, and it really was pitiful to see the English imagine they were enjoying themselves."

I understand that baseball has taken such a hold in some parts of England that it threatens the popularity of cricket, and memorials are to be presented to the House of Commons on the subject."

CARNERA BATTERED BUT NOT FINISHED

MAY MEET BAER AGAIN IN SEPTEMBER

London. PRIMO CARNERA, who was so sensationally defeated by Max Baer in New York, is battered but not disheartened and he is definitely not finished with the ring yet. He is to have a chance to get his revenge next September when, according to Luigi Soreti, his manager, Baer has promised him a return fight.

The giant Italian has also had offers of fights against Jack Petersen, the British heavyweight champion, in London, Paulino Uzcudun, the Spanish heavyweight champion, in Barcelona, and Max Schmeling, former world's heavyweight champion, in Milan.

Carnera, however, is not returning to Europe yet. The giant Italian will not be able to walk for some time, declares his doctor. His ankle is at least badly sprained and several ligaments are torn.

ACCORDING TO SORETI, IT HAD NOT BEEN FOR THIS INJURY, WHICH OCCURRED DURING A KNOCK-DOWN IN THE FIRST ROUND, RESULTING IN HIS HARDLY BEING ABLE TO KEEP HIS FEET, CARNERA WOULD HAVE WON.

It is revealed that Carnera and not Baer was the man for whom the fight should have been postponed.

One doctor who examined him said he was not in a fit condition to enter the ring. He was still suffering from the after effects of influenza which had been aggravated by his having refused to obey his doctor's orders and go to bed.

After the fight it had been stated that Carnera's nose was broken. Dr. Walker, of the New York State Athletic Commission, who examined, said: "There was no signs of his nose having been broken or of his ribs having been fractured, although both were badly bruised."

Jackie Brown's Luck

Severely Punished By French Boxer

DEFENCE SAVE HOLDER

London, July 12. Jackie Brown, holder of the world's flyweight boxing title, probably was lucky to secure a draw against Valentin Angelmann, of France. This was their third meeting, Brown having won the previous two on points.

It was only the holder's defensive work which saved him. For the most part, the challenger took the offensive, rocking Brown from time to time with short but powerful hooks to the face.

Brown scored with straight lefts to the jaw, but his blows were lacking in sting, and could not stem Angelmann's aggressiveness.

The Englishman was at his best when he rained punch after punch in the fifth and twelfth rounds on Angelmann's body.

Thereafter, Angelmann, seeing the title within his grasp, chased his man round the ring, so that on several occasions, Brown was reduced to holding.—Reuter.

Turkey Centre Of Modernism Istanbul Betrays New Trends In Present Era

Even the experienced traveller, thrown open to irreverent eyes as a museum. Here was a vision of that legendary world to which King Solomon and all his glory belonged, as well as the wicked tyrants of Islam. Until I saw those massed jewels, porcelains, silks, embroideries, works of art innumerable heaped up in room after room. I do not think I had ever taken serious notice of the descriptions, either in the Old Testament or in fairy tales, of the lavish treasure of the East. It was a shock to return from such a past to a more vulgar present, when the guide pointed out with equal pride the hideous gifts from modern sovereigns to the late Abdul Hamid; to royalties pass on their presents, I wondered, as one sends round from bazaar to bazaar the monstrosities one is forced to buy in the name of charity? But he swept us back again to barbarism when he brought us up before a little casket in an anteroom. In this, he explained, the Sultan's meals were sealed after being tasted by some megal, to be unsealed by the Sultan himself two hours later, when it was ascertained that the meal still lived. "I'd sooner have my hot-pot safely in the old parlour at home," uttered in broad Lancashire by one of the guide's listeners, seemed an apt comment on this anecdote.

It is at this moment of awakening that we become the prey of the people who have been here before and never tire of telling us that they remember a Constantinople no one will ever see again. It is useless to reply that we saw it just now, when it came and went in the dawn like Aladdin's palace. Their retort to that is that we cannot see the change they mean unless we go ashore, for to them the new Istanbul is summed up in the disappearance of the veil and the fez. I grew a little tired, before my one day in Constantinople was over, of hearing that I ought to have seen it in the days when every woman wore a veil and every man a fez. It is true that I found it difficult to picture the young guide in felt hat and ready-to-wear suit as a vizier's son murmuring "O temptation of the world" to an exquisite hour whose eyes alone were in a position to drink to him, and almost impossible to believe that the rather dowdy-looking Turkish schoolgirls who filed past us in the street, walking two and two as in a boarding school at Eastbourne, could ever furnish romance enough to last for a Thousand and One Nights. But what is the use of imagination if it cannot help us to find romance in the Constantinople that remains, in all that is left now that the veil and the fez are gone—perhaps because they are gone?

Sultan's In All Their Glory
The real answer to this question is that if imagination fails us at this crisis there will soon be no romance anywhere. There is enough of the past left in Istanbul to feed the imagination still, as we found following our guide through the ramifications and splendours of the Sultan's old palace and harem, now after centuries of horrid mystery thrown open to irreverent eyes as a museum. Here was a vision of that legendary world to which King Solomon and all his glory belonged, as well as the wicked tyrants of Islam. Until I saw those massed jewels, porcelains, silks, embroideries, works of art innumerable heaped up in room after room. I do not think I had ever taken serious notice of the descriptions, either in the Old Testament or in fairy tales, of the lavish treasure of the East. It was a shock to return from such a past to a more vulgar present, when the guide pointed out with equal pride the hideous gifts from modern sovereigns to the late Abdul Hamid; to royalties pass on their presents, I wondered, as one sends round from bazaar to bazaar the monstrosities one is forced to buy in the name of charity? But he swept us back again to barbarism when he brought us up before a little casket in an anteroom. In this, he explained, the Sultan's meals were sealed after being tasted by some megal, to be unsealed by the Sultan himself two hours later, when it was ascertained that the meal still lived. "I'd sooner have my hot-pot safely in the old parlour at home," uttered in broad Lancashire by one of the guide's listeners, seemed an apt comment on this anecdote.

But neither the dazzle of treasure nor hint of poison, not all the fairy-like beauty of dome and minaret, or the dirt and colour of the bazaars, could keep the new Turkey from obtruding through the old. The guide's enthusiasm for the reforms of Mustapha Kemal showed that, for the younger generation at all events, progress seems worth the loss of a picturesque relic or two. He told us rather apologetically in one gorgeous apartment that here the Sultan came "when he wanted to enjoy himself"; there stood the divan on which he reclined, "drank a little wine, and looked at beautiful ladies who danced before him." It sounded a harmless diversion, thus described, but he was eager to add that such things only happened when Turkish women were still slaves, wearing the veil and enclosed in the harem. "Now," he concluded proudly, "our women are free, and we are all equal."

Dictated Emancipation
It is not only the tourist who regrets the veil and the fez. The same informant told us that older people are much opposed to giving up these symbols of the old order. To them, no doubt, a dictatorship is all the more objectionable if it decrees freedom for the young, and especially for women. Compared with what has happened in Ger-

POWER STRUGGLE IN TIBET. Three Factions Seeking Political Hold.

According to a Chinese report received in Nanking, three political groups are struggling for power in Tibet: the followers of the late Dalai Lama, who are now in power; the conservatives who favour the return of the Panchan Lama; and the pro-British group who favour a declaration of independence from China by Tibet.

Gen. Huang Mou-sung, Chinese envoy to Tibet, and his secretary, Mr. Wu Ming-yuan, have arrived in Lhasa, and it is expected that measures for the reinstatement of the Panchan Lama in Tibet will be discussed with the Tibetan authorities.

many and Italy, it seems a topsy-turvy dictatorship that frees women at the word of command instead of using the same powers to drive her back to the nursery and the kitchen; and if my one day in Constantinople taught me nothing else, it demonstrated clearly enough that there are dictatorships. I doubt if Western Europe has yet grasped the extent and the significance of the Sultan's. You have to wander, footsore and satiated with the glitter of rich possessions, through interminable private apartments, whether of enslaved women or of the master who kept them, in order to appreciate the scale of the change that has taken place in Turkey. Not even a Mustapha Kemal could have effected it with such completeness or so swiftly, I think, if he had not had the young temperamentally on his side. That is worth remembering, when we sentimentalise about the disappearance of the veil.

Regrets
In Turkey, as elsewhere, there are some who regret the comfortable irresponsibility enjoyed by wealthy women in the harem; but those young girls, walking two and two, unveiled, with the prospect of a career before them, or perhaps of a nice suburban marriage with a young man in a felt hat and ready-to-wear suit, will not regret it. And if it is objected that these changes have been effected brusquely and by force from above, instead of gradually by the people's choice, one sees in this only another facet of the eternal problem that faces us when we find more practical proposals for international peace emanating from a Communist dictatorship than from a National Government elected by the people. But when you have only one day to spend in a golden city of dreams you do not waste it in speculating whether it is better to acquire the right thing by the wrong means or to fail to get it in the full enjoyment of constitutional liberty. You do as I do, buy your box of Turkish delight from the tourist on the quay, and forget that your grocer at home supplies you with a better quality at half the price.

Labour And War

"When Kings go mad, their peoples pay the cost" was an old Roman saying that is as true to-day as it ever was. With all Japan talking of "the crisis of 1935", and preparing for it, it is quite natural that the Trade Union leaders who have recently been holding a special conference in London on the subject of war, should set out to define their attitude as civilians to any future war. Apart from any question of recruiting, war has been so mechanised and industrialised, that in any country where the operatives are as well organised as in England, their passive indifference or opposition would be far more crucial than in the old days of personal combat.

Internationalism has for many years been far more widely spread amongst working men than would be inferred from the action of their Governments. It is not necessarily identified with Socialism or any other party label. The Unions, in the course of trying to raise the standard of living of their members, came across the snag that, if they raised it "unilaterally", that is, independently of foreign competitors, the trade went elsewhere and they were left unemployed. Hence at any time during the last fifty years they have been sending delegates to various centres in Europe to negotiate for common and simultaneous betterment. Most of these Congresses were of a Socialist tinge, but what really interested the English delegates were the questions of hours, wages, and peace. Despite the cheap jibes at the League of Nations, these practical men found a means of achieving their objects in the League and the International Labour Organisation. Outside of Ministries and Departments there is a vast body of sentiment and conviction in favour of the League that has not been able to get itself expressed in official policies.

The old Socialist platform was the simple one of uniting all the workers into a flat refusal to fight under any circumstances. That was the programme of Jaures in France; of Hyndman in England; of the other Socialist leaders in all the European countries. But their principal reliance was on Bebel and his Social Democratic party in Germany, where the party had grown until it controlled an actual majority of votes. In France and England the pacifist movement made war impossible except to repel a clear and unmistakable act of aggression. The invasion of peaceful Belgium swept all hesitation away, and both nations stood as one man behind their Governments. Before that happened the German Social Democrats had been swept away in a storm of martial enthusiasm like corks in a tide-race. Men who lived through those stirring days are not likely to underestimate the instinct of Nationalism, even while they are trying to promote some less chaotic system.

The Trades Union Congress is evidently of opinion that Japan is to-day of the same mentality as Germany in 1914, and that no pacifist section would have any influence. One sentence of the official resolution states "in other countries, such as Japan, the weakness of the trade union organisation made it unable to restrain its Government". In a country where patriotism, interpreted as obedience to the Emperor, is a religion, that is certainly true. It is extraordinary what an amount of avoidable suspicion and antagonism Japan has managed to arouse by the high-handed methods adopted during the last three years. By the Nine-Power Treaty she obtained advantages greater than usually fall to the victor in a successful war; yet she has created a doubt whether that Treaty is any longer valid. As a member of the League of Nations she had a place in world politics that she cannot have alone; the Treaty of London gave her such complete security that even Sir Roger Keyes says that in her own waters she is "untouchable", yet she is voting away some hundreds of millions of yen to build battleships and cruisers that would have been quite unnecessary.

There is little sign that Japanese statesmen are conscious of the "intangible" results of her policy; but it is worth noting that one of them has been to convert the peace-at-any-price men to the view that war may be justifiable and necessary. Another result is that in addition to doubling the track of the Siberian Railway, Russia is securing her rear by getting on to terms with Europe; and still another is that the other signatories to the Nine-Power Treaty are increasing their armaments at a joint cost much greater than Japan alone could afford. Great

WORKS OF ART

The following is a description of a new kind of explosive shell from an advertisement in "The American Machinist":

"The material is high in tensile strength, and is very SPECIAL because it has a tendency to fracture into small pieces upon explosion.... Fragments become coated with the acids (used for the explosive) in exploding, and wounds caused by them mean death in terrible agony within four hours if not attended to immediately.

"There seems to be no antidote that will counteract the poison."

JUSTICE BY MURDER

Midnapore is not the only difficult magistrical post in India: witness this story of Mr. Justice Monroe, of the Punjab High Court.

Recently, he was trying two gentlemen called Baz Khan and Akbar Khan, who were accused of murdering their sister following a misunderstanding over her marriage. Akbar pleaded that in his family murder was not a crime. As far back as he could remember (which was 1920) he did not know of a single natural death in his family.

"Have there been any deaths in your family since 1920?" asked the judge.

"Yes," replied Akbar with disarming simplicity. "During the last 14 years I have attended the funerals of eight relatives. But each was assassinated by some member of the family. We settle our own disputes at home and never trouble the police."

"Both," replied Elmer. "Eight cylinders; 12 payments."

ADMIRAL WHO MADE THE TURF

BRITISH RACING'S DEBT TO HENRY ROUSE

EXPOSED THE CROOKS

(By J. Wentworth Day.)

SIX years ago I sat in a sunny little back library in a house in Balfour-place, talking to the last Lord Coventry. On that sunny morning in an Ascot week the old man who had seen sixty-four Ascots, and been the last Master of the Royal Buckhounds to ride up the course in the green-and-gold of his office, talked of the men and horses he had known in three-quarters of a century of the Turf.

"The greatest man I ever knew," he said, "was the Admiral. He made the Turf. The standard of racecourse behaviour to-day is a greater monument to him than any Rous Memorial at Newmarket.... Yes, he was a great man. But how he and George Payne could rub together so, well as they did sometimes passed my comprehension."

Yet I wonder how many people to-day think of, still less remember, Admiral Rous who cleaned up the Turf as no Trenchard has ever cleaned up London.

Born in January 1795, at Henham Hall, in Suffolk, Rear-Admiral Rous a brother of Lord Stradbroke, served under that grand Norfolk sailor, Sir William Hoste, and on one occasion brought a frigate fifteen hundred miles in twenty days, without a keel or forefoot, practically rudderless and leaking at the rate of two feet of water an hour—a superb piece of seamanship probably without parallel.

When he retired from the sea and from politics in 1846 he took to the Turf for good and all. The Jockey Club in those days, of which he was a Steward, was in a bad way. Its income was a mere three thousand a year. Within a few years he had increased it to £18,000 per annum.

Sacked The Lot

The Turf was infested with crooks, ruffians, copers, tricksters, gamblers, sharpers and pigeons. The rottenness of the Georges had left sport of kings. Even the handicapper to the Jockey Club itself was not above suspicion. Horses were pulled, doped and underhand-capped. Probably at no time in history has the sport of racing ever sunk so low.

Henry Rous, a proud, uncompromising old gentleman with a quarter-deck manner, a hurricane voice and a blistering tongue, sacked the lot. He turned Newmarket, Epsom and Ascot inside out. The crooks were exposed, the sharpers put away, the plunders denounced, and, above all, the handicapping was revolutionised.

Never before or since has there been a man with such an uncanny genius for summing up the chances of a horse. With him it was almost a sort of second sight.

Morning after morning he was on the Heath at Newmarket, glasses in hand, sitting his horse like a ramrod, his eye scanning the Lincolns with the gaze of an eagle. William Day of Woodyates, says of him in his "Reminiscences," one of the best books of the Turf ever written:

"His bold and manly form erect and stately to the last, in a shooting or pea jacket, wearing black boots or leggings of the same colour, dog whip in hand, ready for mounting his old bay horse for the course, no matter what the weather might be, was an imposing sight—before the start he would take up his position close to the 'Buckies', like an equestrian statue, silent and motionless, the reins resting on the neck of his horse.... his eyes, once fixed on the runners, were seldom removed until he had discovered all he wanted to see in the different starters."

Stiff In Opinions

"Thormanby" says of him: "Like all men of strong character and individuality, the Admiral was 'stiff in opinions' and not easily persuaded that they could possibly be wrong."

He hated tobacco and heavy betting, he abominated the landing of jockeys and the "petting" of these precious mannikins. His views on some of the mannikins of to-day would scorch the paint off a ship. But then he thought little of jockeyship. "Any man," he said, "who

PRESIDENT CAUGHT NAPPING

Humorous U.S. Incident Recalled.

THE INOPPORTUNE WOMAN

Washington.

A story of how President John Quincy Adams was caught by a woman in his private swimming hole in old Tiber Creek, not far from the Capitol, has been told by Mr. William Tyler Page, a former clerk of the House, to the Daughters of the American Revolution, says the Washington Star.

Speaking at a ceremony held in the Capitol grounds for the dedication of trees to Presidents of the United States, Mr. Page said that "there was a lady who was very importunate in her demands to get a job in the Federal Government, and she made Adams' life miserable."

"She resolved to get that job. Finally she did a bit of reconnoitering and discovered the secret swimming hole of the President. She repaired to it one day when he was in swimming."

"Now I've got you," she cried, said Mr. Page. "You give me my job or I'll stay right here until you do."

"Madam," protested the President, with only his head sticking out of the water, "you will have to retire from here."

"I'll not retire," she demanded firmly, "until you promise to go to the White House and give me that job."

"All right," said the President. "I'll do that if you'll only retire behind that tree until I get my clothes."—Reuter.

PRICES WEAKER ON WALL STREET

Industrials Slumps 2.50
To 94.74.

SILVER MARKET QUIET

New York, To-day.
With the exception of bonds, which rose .07 to 95.44, prices were weaker on the New York market yesterday.
Industrials and rails were down 2.50 and 1.47 to 94.74 and 40.64, respectively, while utilities declined .55 to 21.96, the commodity index dropped .79 to 58.95.

The silver market was quiet. S. E. Levy and Company's Report in their market report, Messrs. S. E. Levy and Company, correspondents for Messrs. White, Weld and Company, New York, state: "Stocks:—To-day's action can be ascribed to nothing specific but to a more growing feeling of distrust and general discouragement regarding Summer business and the longer range outlook. Until some favourable condition or combination of events occurs to change this attitude, we foresee little chance for more than temporary reversals."

"Bonds:—High-grade issues are slightly better, while second-grade bonds are lower."

"Cotton:—Hitting stop-losses, scattered liquidation and local selling caused a reaction. We believe that the speculative long outlook for Cotton is pretty well cleaned out and purchases are recommended on a further decline."

"Rubber:—Prices are steady in view of heavy Commission House selling and the market acted extremely well."

"What:—The failure of the Winnipeg market to reflect unfavourable crop advices, with prospects of showers and cooler weather in Canada and the North-West, created easiness and the lack of short interest make the market vulnerable to realising. Purchases are still recommended on the scale-down."

Night Telegram
The following telegrams were received during the night service: "Cotton:—To-day is the hottest day yet in all Interior, Western and North-Central Cotton Belts, with very hot weather in the South-West and the bulk of the Mid-West and North-West Belts."

"Grain:—The weather for clear and very torrid everywhere, with the temperature over 100 degrees in the bulk of the United States. There is no sign of relief but conditions in Canada are more cloudy and signs are somewhat more favourable. In the Eastern and South-Central Cotton Belts there are some heavyish rains which are not wanted."

"9.55 p.m.:—There is excessive heat and no rain in the Western Cotton Belt. There is blazing heat over wider Grain areas."

"11.09 p.m.:—The situation is unchanged. Foreign Power & Light gross income has increased by 10 per cent. for the year ended March 31st but the net income is the same as last year. Foreign Power loans have been renewed. A deferment of purchases of Aircraft shares is recommended until the split-up takes place between Aircraft and Transport."—Reuters.

E. A. Pierce Co.'s Report
In their market report, the American Oriental Finance Corporation, correspondents for Messrs. E. A. Pierce and Company, New York, state:

"Stocks: At the moment a feeling of uneasiness is prevalent, with no concrete reason evident. This tendency seems to emphasize the current business recession rather than do any advance discounting."

"Wheat: The failure of the Winnipeg market to reflect the unfavourable crop advices, with the prospect of cooler and showery weather in Canada and the North West, disturbed holders. The lack of short interest makes the market very vulnerable to realising. Liberal country sales and the easier Wheat prices checked the advance in Corn."

"Cotton: The market eased on long Southern and foreign selling which was met by a more limited demand. There is nothing in the weather to warrant any reactionary trend. Selling was influenced to a large extent by the action of the Grains and Securities markets."

"Silver: The market continued to be featureless, with the Trade confined to dealings in July and September positions. Offerings were absorbed by one banking source."

Jiri (George) Strimny, former Prime Minister of Czechoslovakia, is hailed as the man of destiny in his country's affairs. Observers believe that Strimny, leader of the Fascist party, may some time climb to the helm of the nation.

SAMOS SHOOTING INCIDENT.

Turkish Tribute To Fallen Officer.

London, To-day.

The incident off the Turkish coast, in which an officer of H.M.S. "Devonshire" was killed last Saturday afternoon, by rifle fire from Turkish guards, has been amicably settled between the two Governments.

Arrangements were made with the Turkish Government, who had already expressed their regret at the incident, for the joint funeral service which was held yesterday at the spot at which the death occurred.

H.M.S. Devonshire, H.M.S. London and H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth were present, and the Turkish Government detailed a Turkish destroyer to be present, and to associate herself with the ceremony.

The Turkish destroyer cast a wreath into the sea, with an inscription expressing the sympathy and regret of the Turkish Navy.—British Wireless Service.

HEATS EFFECT ON MIND.

Breeds Forgetfulness In Tokyo.

The summer heat is taking its toll on the mental alertness of Tokyo citizens.

Many of the good people of the capital, it seems, cannot think of much else but the heat in the moments of relaxation while travelling, and railway officials say that the number of articles left on the racks and seats of cars on the Shosen line have increased greatly since the sharp rise in temperature a few days ago.

Straw hats lead the list, some 250 to 300 of them being left daily. Folding fans come next, nearly 100 of them being forgotten by passengers each day. Railway officials also state that the forgotten articles range all the way from bathing suits to fountain-pens.

LOCAL DOLLAR STEADY.

Silver Prices Firm.

The local dollar remains steady, opening on demand this morning at 1/5.

Spot and forward silver prices remain unchanged, closing prices yesterday being 20 7/16 and 20 9/16, respectively.

The London on New York cross-rate, which closed on Thursday at $-U.S.$5.04%, closed yesterday at $-U.S.$5.03%, while the New York on London rate closed at $-U.S.$5.04%, as compared with $-U.S.$5.04% on Thursday.

KING'S GESTURE TO POOR GIRL

Rumanian Constable Taken To Task.

INCIDENT IN SOFIA

Sofia.
The King had been to the Opera. Outside the theatre the crowd surged, eager to see His Majesty emerge and enter the waiting royal car. Policemen pressed the people back to keep the way clear.

But a young woman slipped through and stood by the King's car. In her hand she clutched a letter.

"Here, what's this? What do you think you're doing?" A police officer seized her.

"I want to give this letter to the King."

She was Dimitrana Zaharieva, once an attendant in the theatre, dismissed from her job a short time ago.

"Give the letter to me," demanded the policeman. "And stand back. You ought to know the King has better things to do than read letters from a girl like you."

So Dimitrana was engulfed in the crowd, her letter taken from her.

Then out of the theatre came the Royal party—King Boris, his Queen, his brother and his sister. They got into the car. Just as it was moving off, a shrill cry—

"Your Majesty! A policeman has taken my letter to you—now you will never get it!"

King Boris heard. He stopped the car.

"What letter? Where is the letter?"

The zealous policeman, taken back, handed over the letter. The King asked him why he had taken it.

"Well, I have your letter now," called the King, turning towards where the excited Dimitrana was standing. "You may be sure I shall read it carefully and do what ever there is to be done about it."

Then he drove away loudly cheered by the spectators of this little drama.—Reuters.

LOCUST SWARMS IN KIANGSU.

Hopeless Fight At Tsinkiangpu.

The authorities in Tsinkiangpu, Kiangsu, are facing the hopeless proposition of battling against swarms of locusts which have been destroying the produce of the tilled land for miles within the neighbourhood of Liyang and other northern provincial districts.

A curious report in the Shanghai states that the farmers are panic-stricken because they dare not kill the locusts to exterminate the pests as they believed them to be gods. All attempts of the authorities to exterminate the pests are not proving very successful.

U. S. FAVOURED TO WIN OVER AUSTRALIA

It is noteworthy that Jack Crawford who this year has bowed to Fred Perry, Hens Timmer, Roger Menzel, Andre Merin, and G. Von Cramm, decisively beat Frank Shields in the Semi-Final Round at Wimbledon, while Sidney Wood, who might have eliminated Perry in the semi-final but for over-confidence, defeated Vivian McGrath in the First Round at Wimbledon. In the doubles match against France the Australian pair beat Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, holders of the Wimbledon title in 1932 and 1933, but the Americans went one better by snatching the crown from the Frenchmen at Wimbledon this year.

1924 LAST MAJOR ATTEMPT
Not since 1924 has Australia reached the Challenge Round, which this year will be played against Britain at Wimbledon, commencing next Saturday and continuing on Monday and Tuesday. On that occasion they failed to prevent a clean sweep against America.

Within the same period America, besides winning the trophy three times, has figured in eight Challenge Round encounters.

America have won the Davis Cup, donated by Dwight Davis, former Governor-General of the Philippines, in 1900, on eleven occasions while Australasia (with the aid of New Zealand) have had seven triumphs.

To-day's Short Story.

THE RUNAWAY

By Stefan Zweig.

ONE night during the summer of 1918, a fisherman, in his boat on Lake Geneva, not far from the little Swiss town of Villeneuve, caught sight of something unusual on the surface of the water. Drawing nearer to this object he perceived it to be a raft made of beams roughly tied together, which a naked man was awkwardly trying to paddle forwards by means of a plank.

The paddler was cold and exhausted, and the amazed fisherman was touched to pity. He helped the shivering voyager on board his own boat, wrapped him in some nets which were the only available covering, and tried to open up a conversation. But the rescued stranger, cowering in the bottom of the boat, answered in a tongue of which the fisherman could not recognise a syllable. Giving up the attempt as a bad job, the latter hauled in the net he had come to examine, and rowed with steady strokes towards the land.

When the outline of the shore grew plain in the gathering light of dawn, the naked man began to look more cheerful.

A smile played about the large mouth half hidden in an exuberant and disorderly growth of moustache and beard. Pointing shoreward, he repeatedly exclaimed—half questioning and half exultantly—a word which sounded like "Rossiya."

His tone grew ever more confident and more joyful as the boat came nearer to the land. At length the keel grated on the beach.

The fishermen's womenfolk, who ran down to help in the landing of the night's catch, dispersed with cries of alarm, like Nausicaa's maidens of old when they caught sight of the naked Ulysses. At the strange tidings of what the fisherman had found in the lake, the other men of the village flocked to the strand, among them the mayor of the little place. This worthy fellow, self-important and full of the dignity of office, called to mind all the instructions that had come from headquarters during the four years of the war.

Convinced that the new-comer must be a deserter from the French shore of the lake, he promptly endeavoured to make a formal inquiry, but was soon baffled by an impenetrable obstacle—they could not understand one another. To all questions the stranger (rigged out by now in an old pair of trousers and a coat found for him by one of the villagers) made no other answer than his own query, "Rossiya? Rossiya?" uttered in imploring but ever more faltering tones.

MONDAY'S STORY

Monday's story will be "Old Loza's Mango." by Richard Carol.

A trifle annoyed at his failure, the mayor strode off towards the court-house, signing imperatively to the refugee to follow. Amid the babble of the youngsters, who had by now assembled, the bare-footed man, his borrowed habiliments flapping loosely about him, did as he was bid, and thus came to the court-house, where he was placed in safe custody. He made no protest; uttered no word, but his face was once more overcast with gloom, and he stooped timidly as if in expectation of a blow.

The news of the fisherman's remarkable haul soon spread to the neighbouring hotels. Well-to-do visitors, delighted to hear of something which would help them to while away an hour, came in great numbers to inspect the wild man.

A lady offered him some sweets, but with monkey-like suspicion he refused to touch them. A visitor with a camera took a snapshot. Crowding round the rare-show, they all chattered merrily.

At length there arrived upon the scene the manager of one of the largest hotels in the vicinity, a man who had lived in many lands and was a good linguist. He tried the stranger, who was by now bewildered and even frightened, in one tongue after another—German, Italian, English, and finally Russian.

At the first word of Russian, the poor fellow started, and instantly plucked up heart. His homely but good-natured countenance was split by a smile reaching from ear to ear. Instantly, and with confident mien, he began to pour out his history. It was long and confused, and was not in all points intelligible to the chance interpreter. But substantially the story ran as follows.

He had fought in Russia. One day he and a thousand others had been packed into railway carriages, and had travelled a vast distance by train. Then they had all embarked on a ship, and had made a yet longer journey, a voyage across seas on which it was so hot that—as he phrased it—his very bones had been grilled. At length they had land. Another railway journey, and immediately after leaving the train they had been sent to storm a hill. Of this fight he could say little, for at the very outset he had gone down with a bullet in the leg.

To the auditors, taking up the story as interpreted sentence after sentence by the hotel manager, it was at once obvious that this refugee had belonged to one of the Russian divisions sent across Siberia and shipped to France from Vladivostok. Curiosity mingled with compassion, and everyone wanted to know what had induced the man to start on the remarkable journey that had led him to the lake.

With a smile that was frank, and yet not free from cunning, the Russian explained that while in hospital with his wound he had asked where Russia was, and the general direction of his home had been pointed out to him. As soon as he was able to walk, he had deserted, and had guided his homeward course by run and stars. He had walked by night, and by day, to elude the patrols, he had hidden in haystacks.

RECEPE FOR RICH SUPPER DISH

Lobster A La Newburg.

This recipe is for a very rich, "supper" Newburg. Some very special occasion may demand such culinary expression and you will feel justified in serving it.
Two cups lobster meat, 4 tablespoons Madeira, 1-2 cup brandy, 2 cups heavy cream, 1-2 teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne, 1-2 cup button mushrooms, 2 egg yolks.
Put lobster in chafing dish with Madeira and brandy and simmer until almost absorbed. Add cream, mushrooms, salt and pepper and continue to simmer for twenty minutes. When ready to serve add the yolks of eggs slightly beaten with a little cream, about 2 tablespoons, and cook over hot water until thickened. The first simmering can be done over a low heat rather than over hot water.

HAM SUPREME.

3 quarts cold water

BAKING CUSTARD PIE

When a custard pie shrinks from the crust it has been baked in too hot an oven. The oven should be hot for the first five or 10 minutes, in order to bake the pastry so it will not become soaked with liquid. Then reduce the heat or the custard will boil.

When Browning Pies And Tarts.

To brown pies and tarts, use a small pastry brush to apply milk lightly before putting them into the oven, and to glaze pies brush them with the white of an egg if you wish them to be a shiny brown.

Add a cup of grated cheese to the white sauce, in which you serve creamed cauliflower. It gives it a delicious flavour.

BANNED BUTTONS ON COAT.

Swastika Round-Up in Slovakia.

Prague. A man bought an overcoat at a shop at Trnava, in Slovakia. The design on one of the buttons attracted his attention. He looked more closely. It was the swastika (symbol of the German Nazis) which is forbidden in Czechoslovakia. He went to the police, who spent a busy afternoon going round to all the firms of tailors in the place. In shop after shop swastika buttons were all cut off and confiscated.—Reuter.

Now one of the onlookers touched the Russian compassionately on the shoulder and pointed to the door of the inn. With hanging head the runaway entered his temporary abode. He was shown into the tap-room and seated himself at the table where the maid, in welcome, served him with a glass of brandy. Here, overcast with gloom, he spent the rest of the morning. The village children were continually peeping at him through the window; they laughed and they shouted to him from time to time, but he paid no heed. Customers looked at him inquisitively; but all the time he sat with his eyes fixed on the table, shame-faced and shy. When dinner was served the room was filled with merry talkative people; but the Russian could not understand a word of their conversation. Painfully aware that he was a stranger among strangers, he was practically deaf and dumb amid folk who could all exchange ideas in lively fashion. His hands were so tremulous that he could hardly eat his soup. A tear coursed down over his cheek and dropped heavily on to the table. He glanced timidly round. The other guests noticed his distress and a silence fell upon the company. He was overwhelmed with shame; his unkempt head drooped nearer and nearer to the black wooden table. He stayed in the tap-room till evening. People came and went, but he was no longer aware of them nor they of him. He continued to sit in the shadow of the stove, resting his hands on the table. Every one had forgotten his presence. When, in the gloaming, he suddenly rose and went out nobody marked his going. Like a dumb beast he walked heavily up the hill to the hotel and stationed himself humbly, cap in hand, just outside the main door. For a whole hour he stood there without claiming notice from anyone. But at length this strange figure, stiff and black like a tree-trunk rooted in front of the brightly lit entrance to the hotel, attracted the attention of one of the porters, who went to fetch the manager. A flicker of cheerfulness came once more into the Siberian's face at the latter's first words. "What do you want, Boris?" asked the manager kindly. "Beg pardon, Sir," said the runaway haltingly. "All I want to know is... whether I may go home." "Yes, Boris, of course you may go home, said the manager with a smile. "To-morrow?" "The other grew serious. The word was said so imploringly that the smile vanished. "No, Boris, not yet.... Not till the war is over." "How soon? When will the war be over?" "God knows! No man can say." "Must I wait all that time? Can't I go sooner?" "No, Boris." "Is my home so far away?" "Yes."

can no longer help one another." The two stood gazing into each other's eyes. Boris twisted his cap between his fingers. "Why did they take me away from home? They said I had to fight for Russia and the Tsar. But Russia is a long way off, and the Tsar... what did you say they had done to the Tsar?" "They have deposed him." "Deposed?" He repeated the word vaguely. "What am I to do, Sir? I must get home. My children are crying for me. I cannot live here. Help me, Sir, please help me!" "I cannot, Boris." "Can no one help me?" "No one, now." The Russian hung his head still more sadly. Suddenly he spoke in a dull tone: "Thank you, Sir," and therewith turned on his heel and departed. Slowly he walked away down the hill. The manager watched him as he went and wondered why he did not enter the inn, but passed onwards down the steps leading to the lake. With a sigh the kindhearted manager went back to his work in the hotel. As chance would have it, the very same fisherman who had rescued the living Siberian from the lake found the drowned man's naked body in the morning. The runaway had carefully folded the borrowed coat and trousers, had laid them on the shore with the borrowed cap and had marched down into the water, nude as he had come forth from it. Since the foreigner's name was unknown, no memorial, but a nameless wooden cross could be erected over his grave.

NO ANGLO-DUTCH TRADE PACT

Fair Play in Trade Pledged By Notes.
 PARLEYS TERMINATED

London, To-day.
 As it has not been found possible at present to conclude a full commercial agreement between the United Kingdom and the Netherlands Governments, the negotiations have been terminated by an exchange of notes issued last night.
 These notes place commercial intercourse between the two countries on a fair footing and amounts to the definite establishment of the United Kingdom's claim to receive its full share of all quotas without giving additional compensation.
 In return, the United Kingdom accords the same treatment to the Netherlands as it has always done.

TECHNICAL POINTS
 The remaining clauses deal with technical points designed to simplify operation of quotas as between the two countries.
 It is also provided that, from August 1, 1934, each Government resumes its liberty of action as regards customs duties on imported goods without prejudice to the provisions of treaties and agreements already in force between them.
 It is, moreover, provided that the delegations which conducted the recent discussions will remain in being and it is hoped that they may open up possibilities for increasing trade between the two countries—British Wireless Service.

BUSINESS PESSIMISM OVERDONE

NEW YORK EXPERTS' OPINION.

STRIKE A BLESSING IN DISGUISE

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
 (By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894, Received July 21, 9.32 a.m.)

New York, To-day.
 Messrs. Dun and Bradstreet state that business is surprisingly steady and that the pessimism is "undoubtedly overdone." Commenting on the strike they state that the dispute "has done more this week than any organized curtailment for the reduction of industrial output."

The boom in domestic and foreign travel is one encouraging factor which is sometimes overlooked they add.

The New York journal, "Analyst" states: "We expect temporary spurts such as the result of further efforts at artificial stimulation. The present indications suggest that sustained recovery will not be resumed until possibly in November."—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

Lorry Drivers' Violence At Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, To-day.
 Nine people, including a policeman, were wounded here yesterday in an outbreak of violence connected with the strike of lorry-drivers.

A grocery wagon was being moved by the police through a "Blockade area" when a lorry, packed with strikers, dashed alongside. The police, taken by surprise, fired over the heads of the strikers as they scrambled out of the lorry and attempted to board the wagon and drag the driver from his seat.

This failed to check the rush and the police lowered their aim, hitting several assailants.
